

Tutor Feedback- Reflective Activity Ethics in Computing

Hi Sahib,

Thank you for your e mail.

Please see my constructive feedback below:

- It is good to see you are using Arial font size 12 and double line spacing in your paragraphs, with appropriate spacing between paragraphs. This follows the required academic conventions for academic writing.
- However, don't make your paragraphs so 'shallow'. Get a reasonable line count when writing paragraphs
- Its good to see that you are citing through some of your content. When citing though, don't use the same citation twice, one after another. Ensure that you have enough different research references read and investigated to ensure you can really mix your citation up from different research references
- Cite in every paragraph, you should not have any paragraphs that do not contain citation
- When using Bott as one of your references at the beginning of a paragraph; as you are speaking of Bott, take the authors name out of the brackets and use only the year in brackets. If you were speaking of some of this authors research in a general context and say were referencing them mid way through or at the end of a paragraph it would be completely fine to fully bracket Bott and the year in a citation, but not at the beginning of a paragraph.
- You are using fact to develop your discussion, however your content is very descriptive currently. You need to get some critical discussion occurring by comparing fact in paragraphs and looking at one of research point of view and then comparing it to another to get a 'pros' and 'cons' discussion debate occurring - this is something that you will really need to work on for written summative in this module

- For your reference list, good to see it is written in alphabetical order. No need to add bullet points, just list your references
- Also good to see your list of references on their own page, this is appropriate and good academic practice
- You do have an emerging academic tone. Your academic writing style is more confident from the mid section of the assignment to end, and so take this part of your approach forward. Also ensure that your academic tone of voice is wholly consistent all the way through future assignments
